AR CROOKED YOU

THE most penetrating portrait yet made of Mr Crooked, the average young British criminal, is unveiled today. It is built up from an analysis of the minds and the motives of more than 200 criminals known personally to Mr Joseph Trenaman, the psychologist who presents it.

Mr Crooked, the man who appears in the dock, shows up as a type far removed from the burly hoodlums of fiction. He stands about 5 ft. 6 ins. in his showy socks, he is under average height. And he is something of a lightweight, scaling only 9 st. His slight build may be due to an excessive share of sickness during childhood. In any case he is almost certain to be perpetually worrying about his health for he is a hypochondriac and fearful by nature.

IN contrast to fiction, the reallife Mr Crooked is not unduly interested ' in girls: In fact he probably feels more sentimental attachment to his mother than a normal man though his home is poor and overcrowded. Crooks usually come from large families.

Pointers on Posing

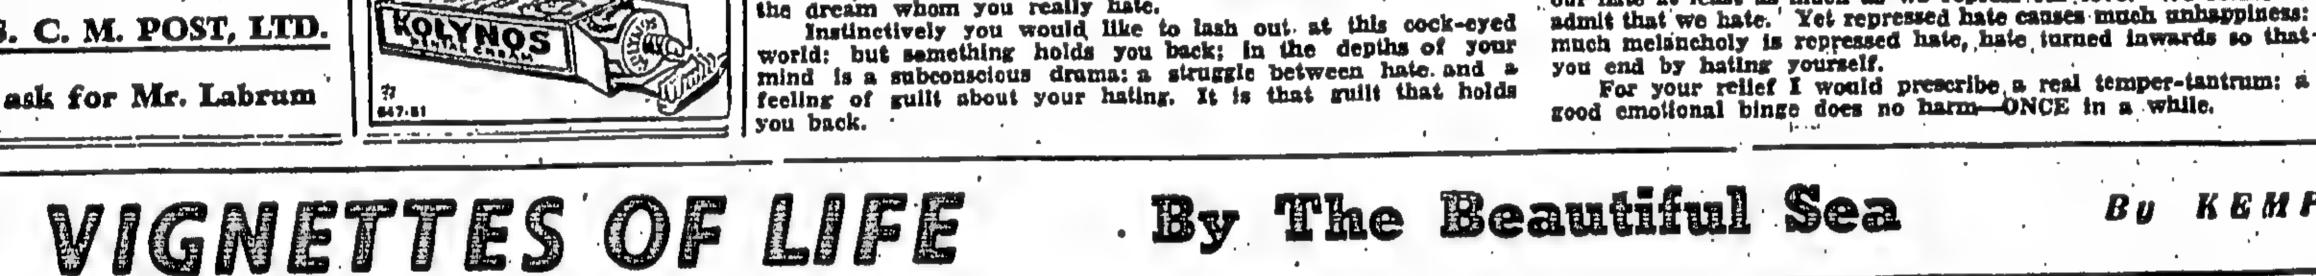

TOU can improve your pictures by knowing how to pose your subjects. And the secret of posing, condensed in a nutshell, is not to pose but to be natural. Webster defines the verb "to pose" as "to assume a studied 'attitude." What you want is not a studied attitude but a natural one.

That's why, as a general rule, the best informal pictures of people show them reading, cutting flowers, petting a dog, or engaging in some other simple activity. Such shots are natural shots. The Bubject, attention absorbed by what he's doing, doesn't "freeze up" for the

But granted this point there are several other tricks that can help your picture. One is to pose your subject in a plane parallel to the film. Another is to keep the picture compact. It's possible to make a good snapshot of a girl stretched out full length on the floor, reading the Sunday paper. Possible, but not easy. Generally, such a shot will wind up as a windmill effect—all arms and legs.

After all; when you pose for n picture, you hope it will do you justice. And when you take someone clac's picture, you should be fair to them. Make sure they are relaxed and comfortable. Being comfortable is the first step. to being natural. Remember, unless a person looks pleasant and comfortable in your view - finder, he won't : look pleasant and comfortable in your Unished print.

League Hockey Season Starts lomorrow By "STICKS"

The clash between Army "A" and Recreto in the Senior Division of the Hockey League should prove the most interesting game this week-end. As he Army have many newcomers to their ranks, they will not have the same close team work that they, achieved towards the end of last season. '

Recreio remain unchar ged with their extremely well-balanced team should Kitchee v CAA (Navy-5.15 bring off the first victory of the season.

"The Police" feam should offer no difficulties to the experienced RAF side, who have much the same team as last season. Rumour has it that the Police team may have new-talent- recently arrived from Pakistan.

The Navy rather suffer from "here-today-gone-tomorrow" shuffle and accordingly their team is almost entirely made up of new players, but Sullivan continues to provide a stalwart defence and Chamberlain, last years' right back, moves up to the forward-line to give an added vigour to the attack.

The other 1st Division game between the Argonauts and the Thunderbolts should be a blood match. Here the Thunderbolts CMB v RAMC (H.V.-5.15 probably have the slightly atronger side, especially as they are playing on their home ground, but it should be interesting to see whether Argonauts employ the same defensive tactics that they used last season.

> Newcomers to the Second Division are the Black Hawks, a Portuguese side and the Sukon Sports Club, an unknown

Although the Ludies' League does not start for another fortnight, all the teams have had several practices. This season both University and Little Flower Club, have dropped out and Recrelo' and the Dorians, are putting in two teams instead of one. The Diocesan Girls have apparently decided that they are strong enough to compete with their big sisters, and have entered one team.

YOUR TRAINER PLANE Crossword

HIS may not be the jet plane you really want to fly—but it is a fine, homemade "next best thing." You will have seen the pictures, marvelled at the pilots-now you can take the first lesson that every pilot learns. If you build this model in the garden or playroom, you can go through all the motions of flying just as a real pilot does. The joy-stick and rudder bar will work just as they do in a full-size plane.

And you can learn to take off, climb, bank, swoop, and come in to land. So find your string, your chairs and bits and pieces - and be off to the flying ground for the first take-off.

A fighter pilot tells you here how to control the Trainer.

ALL YOU NEED for the Trainer-plane: Two chairs for the cockpit; a walkingstick rudder bar; a table or ironing board body; cardboard and string.

The only alternative, after drawing trumps and clearing the hearts, is to lay flown the ace of clubs and continue with a low club. This works if either opponent has a singleton club henour or if either opponent has a doubleton club, including either the king or the queen.

As a matter of percentage, there ds a slight advantage in leading a

But if there is an uncongenial atmosphere, you can become very difficult, indeed. You are often too sensitive and care too much about what others think of you. Why we say A mews-

The word "mew" has a long history. Its origin was the Latin muture, to change, from which came the French mue, moulting of the feathers in birds. The English word "mew" came mean a cage in which birds were kept while moulting and was then applied solely to a cage for hawks and falcons. The royal stables then came to called "the mews" because horses were stabled where the king had kept his falcons. Then London garages came to be called "mews" when cars took the place of Finally horses. housing shortage caused these "mews" to be turned into flats for human beings.

London, Sept. 26. Britain is considering the whole question of the supply of arms to Middle East countries, usually wellinformed quarters said tonight.

The Israeli Minister, Eliahu Elath, today called on Sir James Bowker, Under-Secretary at the Foreign Office in charge of Middle Eastern Affairs, for the second time this week to prement that arms should not be supplied to the Arab States while they are still at war with Israel.

Similar appeals have been made by the Israeli envoys in Paris and Washington.

A well-informed source said tonight that Sir James Bowker did not indicate British reaction to the appeal at today's meet-

The policy of the three Western powers in the Middle East is governed, by the Tripartite declaration on May 1950, which stated that if the three powers found either Israel or the Arab States preparing to violate frontiers or armistice lines, they would take action "both within and without the framework of the United Nations." No arms will be supplied, it is understood here, in cases where they might be used to increase the risk of renewed hostilities in the Middle East.

Despite some anxiety in Israel about the possibility of a second round of fighting in Palestine being launched by the Arab nations, opinion here does not regard this as probable.—Reuter.
